EXCEL MAKES THE BEST OF OPEN HOUSE TO THE RESCUE

Brooklyn, NY February 23, 2009 – Quickly becoming a regular part of the popular NBC series, Open House to the Rescue, Excel Builders & Renovators Inc. was featured on a “best of” episode shown earlier this month. The segment which originally aired in November of last year centered on a family of four from Windsor Terrace, Brooklyn facing a serious deck problem. It was shown in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

The original program, which can be seen at <http://lxtv.com/helpme/video/9300>, shows homeowners Jody and Brad Alperin struggling with the rotted timber and splintered railings of an old wooden deck, making it unsafe for their four and two year old children. Excel replaced the decking and railings with a green and safe recycled material known as Trex®. Trex® won't rot, splinter, warp or split making it an ideal material for a home with young children.

The episode is the first of several being filmed with Excel Builders. Asked for comment Excel President Matthew Goldfine added, “We have a few things in the works and are currently shooting a fireplace overhaul we are doing for a family in Cobble Hill. We love working with Rachel (Kamrasch, the show's producer), George (Oliphant, host of the show) and the entire NBC team. The segment is scheduled to air next month.
